The Republicans submitted a proposal that would put East St. Louis, the Quad-Cities and Centerville Township into a congressional district, excluding all other portions of Madison and St. Clair counties.

Hospice needs helpers

Hospice of Madison County is recruiting professional and lay volunteers to provide support for terminally ill persons and their families. Completion of a 12-hour volunteer training course is mandatory. The next course will be offered on two Saturdays, Feb. 10 and 17, from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. in the Wiesman Room at St. Elizabeth Medical Center, 2100 Madison Ave., Granite City. There is no charge for the training, and lunch is provided. Free parking is also available. Those interested should call 798-3399 or 656-8228 before Friday, Feb. 2, to arrange an interview.

AN AQUACENTER VIEW: Man's fascination with the water that makes up four-fifths of the earth's surface could lead to endless pleasure in the proposed Aquacenter in Pontoon Beach. This scene, part of a slide presentation shown recently to village trustees, is an example of what visitors see at aquacenters throughout the nation, said local project director Leonard Sonnenchein. An in-depth look at the interest being shown in the Pontoon Beach proposal, plus what really goes on inside such an attraction, will be presented on the Lifestyle page of this Thursday's Press-Record.

Webster park nears reality

By Mike Myers
Staff writer

GRANITE CITY — The city's goal of making a neighborhood park out of the former Webster School in East Granite is several steps closer.

The District 9 board has passed a resolution to deed the school at East 25th and Kate streets to the Granite City Park District. The Park District has, by letter, tentatively agreed to accept the property.

Both the school board and park board actions, however, are contingent upon the city paying to demolish the school building, landscape the property and plant trees.

The Madison County Board, by letter, has agreed to pay half the cost of the demolition and landscaping if the city will pay the other half.

which the city has agreed to do.

About all that remains, according to Alan Orbals, city economic development director, is for three taxing bodies — parks, city and schools — to draw up and approve an intergovernmental agreement. After that, the demolition can begin.

"I don't see any reason it can't be a park by the first of May," Orbals said.

The estimated cost for demolition and site improvement is $80,000: $18,000 for asbestos removal, $50,000 for demolition and $12,000 for soil, grass, fertilizer and trees. The city and county would each pay $40,000, both using federal Community Development funds.

After the site improvement is completed, the site would be deeded directly from the school district to the park district.

Rank loss in new police rules

By Mike Myers
Staff writer

GRANITE CITY — The Board of Fire and Police Commissioners would have the disciplinary power to reduce police officers by one rank, if an ordinance before the City Council is approved.

Police Chief Don Knight said the ordinance is designed to provide a middle level of punishment for officers found guilty in a hearing before the commissioners.

Currently, he said, the commissioners' only choices are suspension of up to 30 days or dismissal.

"This would give the commissioners something midway," Knight said. "The city put a lot of time, money and effort into training these officers."

Knight said it is possible an officer could commit an offense severe enough to merit more than a 30-day suspension, but "have enough good in him to be salvaged" and later be an asset to the department.

"Rather than lose someone who could become a good officer, we could take away a rank, give the person reduced responsibility and give them another chance," Knight said.

The chief said that, since officers first hired are probationary patrolmen, that is the lowest rank in the department and it would be possible to reduce a patrolman by one rank.

Fourth Ward Alderman Dan Partney, who was the only alderman to vote against placing the ordinance on first reading Tuesday, said he objected to giving the commissioners any more power.

"Already, they hire and fire people on their own" (See POLICE, Page 8A)

Good deed spills into street, ruffling some union feathers

By Mike Myers
Staff writer

GRANITE CITY — A citizen doing a good deed ruffled feathers Friday morning all the way to City Hall, but by afternoon the feathers were all smoothed out.

Don Caughron, owner of Don's Hardware on Delmar Avenue, got tired of seeing trash collect in front of empty store fronts and in vacant lots in the downtown area. So he decided to hire someone to clean them up.

Mayor Von Dee Cruse and Street Superintendent Mac Warfield both supported the idea. Warfield even agreed to schedule street sweeping in conjunction with the cleanup.

"I just hired some unemployed people, figuring I'd be doing them a favor, too, and paid them out of my pocket," Caughron said. "I just told them to clean up the store fronts, the lots, the little parks."

The problem came when Caughron's crew was cleaning out the gutter and a drain on Adams Street, in front of the Street Department.

It was compounded by the presence of a Press-Record/Journal photographer who was accused of trying to embarrass the Street Department. Actually, the photographer said he had been trying to catch up with Caughron's crew for three days, making several trips before locating the workers on Adams Street. Caughron had given the photographer several locations in which the men would be working.

The Teamsters and Laborers unions, which represent the street crews, quickly got involved, complaining that union work was threatened.

The unions, Warfield, Cruse, Caughron and the newspaper got into a criss-cross of phone calls and meetings on Friday.

When the dust settled, everyone admitted it was an unfortunate error.

"I think it was just an error of judgment," said Jim Schmiedake, business agent for the Laborers. "It seems like a matter of confusion and I'm giving everyone the benefit of the doubt."

WORKERS from Don's Hardware clean along Adams Street.

"Cleaning up along store fronts is one thing, but it's a lot different cleaning out gutters and catch basins. (Caughron's) men shouldn't have been there."

Schmiedake said liability could have come into play if someone had been hurt while working.

Caughron said his workers had gotten carried away, both in where and what they were cleaning. "They thought they were doing such a good job they decided to go a step farther," Caughron said Friday. "And they ended up in the street. I discovered yesterday they had gone all the way down Madison Avenue."

Caughron said his crew "didn't understand about unions." He speculated that the problem started innocently: "They saw a beer can in the street and went ahead and picked it up. The next thing you know, they were shoveling out gutters."

The original cleanup plan was successful, Caughron said, and he plans to continue to hire people to clean up downtown two times a month. "But not in the streets," he said.

Alderman trying to keep job

By Mike Myers
Staff writer

GRANITE CITY — Although the state's attorney says 4th Ward Alderman Dan Partney will forfeit his elected office upon sentencing for a perjury conviction, the alderman remains hopeful of keeping the job.

State's Attorney Bill Haine said the forfeitures would remain in effect through the appeal process, should Partney choose to appeal the verdict.

But Partney, who also stands to lose his office as Precinct 8 Democratic committeeman, said his attorney, Leon Scroggins, is preparing "a number" of post trial motions that "will give (Associate Circuit Judge Lola Maddox) all the ammunition she needs to overturn the verdict."

A county jury Wednesday also found Partney's brothers, Don and Dave, each guilty of one count of perjury. Don and Dave Partney voted in Precinct 8 based on listing their residence as 2500 Missouri Ave., the address of Granite Sheet Metal, the family business. Dan Partney signed affidavits attesting to it being their residence.

Haine said forfeiture of office is "unpleasant, but, to paraphrase the scripture, you live by the election code, you die by the election code."

"We're not seeking jail or prison time in this case. I think forfeiture of office and a fine would be a reasonable punishment."

Partney said, if for some reason the verdict is not overturned, he will ask for immediate sentencing so the case can be appealed immediately. In that case, he said, he may file for an injunction to retain his offices until the appeal process is complete.

"I don't feel I've gotten my full due process of law until the appeal is completed, but, if the court decides that's not the case, I'll take it as it comes."

"The only worst case scenario I can see would be for me to get run over by a truck and killed before the case is over. I am confident a court at some level will overturn the verdict."

Neither Don or Dave Partney claimed to live at Granite Sheet Metal, but contended they had chosen it as their legal residence based upon the advice of two attorneys. All three brothers said during the trial they had signed the affidavits based upon that advice.

Haine said the Partneys, especially Dan Partney, have been in and around politics long enough to know better, despite their attorney's advice.

"You cannot have individuals deciding where they want to vote, whether ward, city, township, or anything else," Haine said. "It's absolutely as clear a principle as there ever was — you vote where you live. Then you can pick or choose where you want to say you live."

"If the jury had gone any other way, or if I had declined to pursue this case, you could have 1,000 workers voting out of Granite City Steel or any other plant."

"I think this case sends a message: In Madison County the election code is taken very seriously."

Haine said the whole matter could have been avoided if, when challenged at the polling place,

Bowles says: Voters beware

By Andy Siering

EDWARDSVILLE — County Clerk Evelyn Bowles says she doesn't know what her office can do to prevent voters from registering from false addresses as Don and Dave Partney allegedly did.

But, she said, those who do not give their correct address are subject to prosecution for perjury if they are caught giving false information.

"People who come to register are required to bring two pieces of identification, one of which gives the address of their domicile," Bowles said. "Friday in the wake of the perjury convictions of three Partney brothers, who included

Flu, weather 'old' problem

By Meg Tebo
Staff writer

GRANITE CITY — A St. Elizabeth Medical Center official says that the number of patients suffering from respiratory illnesses are keeping staff members running this season.

"We just seem to have a geographically concentrated incidence of respiratory illness, and that's a big factor," said Dan McDowell, a respiratory pathologist.

Mostly elderly people are affected, he said, and most have pre-existing lung problems.

"The flu and this weather definitely play a part. People don't know when to dress each day. One day it's 60 degrees, the next it's snowing," said McDowell.

McDowell said the respiratory staff usually sees 25-30 patients each day, but lately they've had to deal with 40 in one day at times.

"I don't really see a definite chance for a break until the weather is ready to stay warm for good," McDowell said.

"We're lucky to have a dedicated staff who are willing to work extra hours to handle all of the patients."

EARLY MORNING BLAZE: Mitchell volunteer firefighters battle a garage fire shortly after midnight Wednesday morning. It destroyed the structure and a boat valued at $10,000 to $12,000. The fire apparently started in an electric outlet on the rear wall of the frame building adjacent to the home of Mike Yarborough, 4920 Hills Ave. in Mitchell. Loss of the structure and boat is estimated at $35,000.

Cars to have automatic belts

SPRINGFIELD — This will be a landmark year for traffic safety. In 1990 all new cars sold in the U.S. must have some type of automatic occupant protection system in the front seat — either airbags or automatic seatbelts.

Lois Robinson, executive director of the Illinois Coalition for Safety Belt Use, predicts that fatalities and injuries due to vehicular crashes will decrease in the coming decade if these automotive systems are used properly.

In 1990 almost 3 million new cars will be equipped with airbags. Airbags are supplementary devices which are most effective when used in conjunction with safety belts. Unbelted occupants may be stopped suddenly by impacting the instrument panel or steering wheel, causing serious injury. Safety belts distribute the load and stop the occupant more gradually, with the vehicle.

In very severe crashes, even belted occupants may contact the steering wheel or dashboard and sustain injuries. Airbags supplement the protection provided by safety belts. They distribute the impact load more evenly over the driver's upper torso, reduce pressure concentrations associated with a driver's head contacting the steering wheel, and absorb a portion of the moving occupant's energy.

Airbags inflate in frontal crashes, the leading cause of deaths and injuries in motor vehicle collisions.

According to the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration, each year 22,000 people are killed in the front seat of passenger cars. Frontal crashes account for half of all occupant fatalities and airbags are most effective in frontal crashes.

"We have made tremendous progress in Illinois in traffic safety in the last decade," Robinson said. "Our fatality rate (per hundred million miles travelled) has decreased 25 percent. With improved occupant restraint systems and their correct use, we will see more improvement in the 1990s."

Burns content as Hartigan's No. 2

By Dennis Grubbaugh
Managing Editor

GRANITE CITY — At 6-feet-4, Jim Burns could cast a pretty good shadow if he tried. But now he's content to walk in the shadow of the man who would like to become his boss.

Burns wants the job of Illinois lieutenant governor, running in this spring's primary with Democratic gubernatorial candidate Neil Hartigan.

Burns was in town last week to talk over his campaign, making an appearance before the Madison County Police Association and attending a DARE graduation at an elementary school in Roxana.

During an interview with the Press-Record/Journal, Burns made it clear that his position on issues is secondary, although frequently complimentary, to Hartigan's.

"Neil has said publicly and privately that he wants someone to run with him as a partner (in the lieutenant governor's office)," he said.

Jim Burns
Hartigan running mate

"Neil wants government to be accountable to voters and taxpayers," he said. "People are sick and tired of taxes."

Is Gov. Thompson's repeated plea for new tax money one that will carry over into the next administration? "I don't even want to get into that question," responded Burns, "until we take the money we've got and make sure we're doing what we should be with it."

Two of Hartigan's platforms, education and the shrinking work force, are linked.

"Minorities, Hispanics and women will have an increasing role (in the work place)," Burns said. "The education 'battle' and there is going to be one — will be on financing (education) and getting kids ready so they fit into the economy."

Burns, 44, refers to himself as a native of southern Illinois. He was born in Quincy and moved to McLeansboro as a child. He followed that with an extensive sports career including high school, Northwestern University and a short time in the pros, with the Chicago Bulls. Today, he lives in Evanston with his wife and three children.

After graduation, he accepted a job with the U.S. Attorney's Office, served under three U.S. attorneys and tried more than 1,000 drug-related cases.

He is now a partner in the law firm of Keck, Mahin & Cate.

Burns was about to run for state attorney general, when fellow Democrats convinced him to run on the Hartigan ticket.

Among Hartigan's other goals, Burns said, is a stop to state-mandated laws that don't come with some way to pay for them.

In his role as lieutenant governor, Burns would be "chief lobbyist," seeking out any state grant money available.

Burns declined "to be critical" of Republican Lt. Gov. George Ryan when asked if he would change any of the programs now administered by Ryan. He did, however, point out that the office's powers are few and include such things as land reclamation issues and a senior citizen advocacy program.

Despite few official powers, he said he would not be inactive. "I don't need to have a ribbon-cutting position as a full-time job."

Business, health groups eye clean-air plans

By Jason Moody
Staff writer

WASHINGTON — Business and public interest groups are rushing to assign dollar values to the air we breathe, just as Congress has placed clean-air legislation on the top of its winter agenda.

The annual health costs of motor vehicle pollution — the largest contributor to dirty air — could be as high as $4.1 billion in Illinois and $1.9 million in Missouri, according to the American Lung Association.

Chicago and western areas of Metro East already have vehicle exhaust testing.

In a report released Friday, the American Lung Association strongly encouraged Congress to adopt the most aggressive of the wide range of auto emissions proposals now pending in Congress.

According to the study, a so-called "tier 2" plan would cut auto emissions in half by the year 2003.

Just one day earlier a group of 200 business leaders from across the nation released its own study on the costs associated with the new clean-air proposals but dismissed attempts to assign dollar amounts to the benefits.

"I don't want to get into that debate about whether there are health benefits. It's irrelevant because we can't estimate it," said Philip Masciantonia, speaking Thursday on behalf of the Business Roundtable.

The heavily pro-business Roundtable said a "best estimate" for air cleanup costs in Illinois resulting from the more stringent legislative proposals would be $2.7 billion per year and $1.9 billion for Missouri.

Masciantonia said that business had already made great strides in reducing pollutants and new attempts to strengthen the Clean Air Act would be catastrophic for industry.

Quoting Environmental Protection Agency figures, Masciantonia said that from 1970 to 1987 airborne lead was reduced by 88 percent, sulfur dioxide reduced by 35 percent, carbon monoxide down by 32 percent and ground level ozone reduced by 16 percent.

The Roundtable report said current clean-air laws impose an exact a hefty price tag from industry of $32 billion per year.

The Business Roundtable fears that with changes to the Clean Air Act — such as motor vehicle emission controls, ozone reductions and increased acid rain restrictions — the final tab for the manufacturing industry could reach $104 billion annually nationwide.

The Lung Association's best guess is Americans would save $40 billion to $50 billion a year in health care costs with approval of the Senate's proposed clean air legislation.

It's estimate came after examining 12 studies of illness and premature death caused by air pollution.

Crime hot topic in Venice

By Andy Siering
Staff writer

VENICE — Rampant crime, primarily burglaries, has been a hot topic of late in the city.

Mayor Tyrone Echols and several aldermen sounded off on the need for citizens to report crimes they see happening during a recent meeting.

Echols said citizens not only need to report crime, they must be willing to testify in court.

"If you see it, you got to tell it," Echols said.

Alderman Henry Fletcher observed that "a lot of people don't have the guts to testify."

Alderman Victor Valentine said the police needed to start enforcing curfew laws for juveniles.

"It's time to crack down on kids walking the streets at night. If parents can't control them, they (the children) need to be in the juvenile detention home."

Valentine voiced an increasingly familiar complaint in Venice — that judges and prosecutors are not tough enough on young black offenders, turning them loose to commit more crimes.

"We don't have enough black judges in the county," Valentine said.

In other discussion, it was noted that the city was starting to get extra revenue as a result of the state income tax surcharge passed last year, but that it was coming in at a projected rate of about $60,000 extra per year.

instead of the $200,000 windfall city officials had hoped for.

The council also passed two financial measures. One resolution transferred about $119,000 in 1990 city tax receipts from the general corporate fund into the working cash fund. The second resolution transferred it back.

Mayor Echols mentioned an idea he has for widening Broadway between the Venice Public Library and Lee Park, in effect creating a town square and increased parking space.

He said money for the project was available from Madison County Community Development funds through the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development.

But Echols said the city needed to act quickly while the funds were still available.

Alderman Fletcher suggested that the project could endanger children playing in the park.

Echols rejected that argument.

After brief discussion, the council wound up tabling the matter until its next meeting, on Jan. 30.

Cruise co-star tells Tom tales

David Warshofsky, who is appearing on the main stage at the Repertory Theater of St. Louis in "Precious Memories," also can be seen in Tom Cruise's hit film, "Born on the Fourth of July."

"Warshofsky plays the role of Cruise's lieutenant in Vietnam during the pivotal scene when Cruise's character is grievously wounded," Warshofsky said he worked on the film for three weeks and that the Vietnam scenes were shot in the Philippines. They were some of the last scenes shot.

"Cruise was completely burnt by the time we started working in the Philippines," said Warshofsky, 28. "He had spent so many weeks in a wheelchair and became so immersed in the role, I think it was really starting to get to him."

Warshofsky said "Born on the Fourth of July" director Oliver Stone is a man who knows what he wants.

The powers that be at The Mundy are pleased with the turnout for their presentation of "Fiddler On The Roof," which played Jan. 27 at the Fox Theater.

The show, which starred noted Israeli actor Topol, drew 25,000 people to the performances. One Mundy staffer said ticket sales were a little slow until they "exploded" the day after the show opened.

Mundy officials expect the return of "Les Misérables" May 8 through 13 at the Fox to be the best attended show of the winter.

Rob Lieberman of Clayton-based LAL Advertising, the firm that handles the Warner Brothers account in St. Louis, reports that Warner has the following six headings on the top of their movie-goers review report form: rave, excellent, good, mixed, poor and toilet.

Believe it or not, Warner Brothers likes getting forms back that say their movie is in the "toilet" category, Lieberman said.

"They say it's a sure indication that if the critics hate it, the public will usually love it," he said.

Lieberman cited "Tango & Cash" as an example. That Warner Brothers' release received many "toilet" reviews, yet it averaged $10 million per week in box office receipts in its first three weeks of release. Harry Hamm is entertainment editor for both KMOX-AM (1120) and CBS Radio.

Valuable lesson in unlikely place

He worked part time. I never even bothered to think if he still was in the area. He was the typical kid who pumps gas at the corner station — sometimes almost arrogantly high-spirited, sometimes murderously slow. Many times I was going to pump gas when I saw him and I would freeze for him to ring the cash register. I stereotyped him as not the brightest, almost punk.

But one day he taught me an incredible lesson.

Chemotherapy is difficult enough to experience; you feel like the inside of a battered alley trash can. But when you are truly the pits, I never had that much of it to start with. Losing it all was emotionally very difficult, and finding a wig that didn't look ridiculously thick and bushy was a real problem.

But slowly I got used to it. I could even go for hours and forget I was wearing one. Still, when I was home for any length of time, the wig could be very itchy and tight. My kids got used to seeing me as a "bowling ball."

Once they had to be at school very early the next morning and I volunteered to drive. Then I remembered that the car's gas gauge read empty, so that night I dashed down to the corner station just before closing.

As I got out of my car to pump my gas, he just stood there, his chin on the concrete.

"Dumb kid, what's his problem?" I thought. Then I raised my hand to pat my false curls back into place and froze with the realization that the peach fuzz was all I could touch. I had forgotten to put the wig on as I dashed out the door.

Death seemed a minor irritant in comparison to my feelings at that moment.

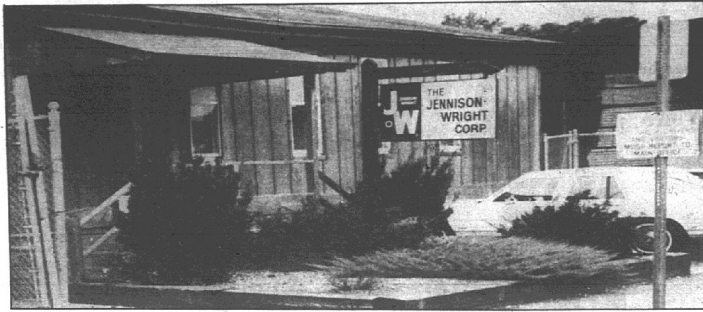

I mumbled something about chemotherapy and loss of hair, and then he transformed my life. Taking the pump out of my hands, he said, "Yeah, I saw a television show about that the other night. It must be hell to go through, but they say it really helps. Don't worry about your hair, lady. You just go for it with everything you've got. We'll all be rooting for you."

As he finished pumping the gas, he smiled. "Do your kids call you 'bowling ball'?"

I started laughing and crying at the same time as I answered, "Sure."

"You just tell them you're going for 300," he said.

Jennison-Wright worker bitter about plant closing

By Andy Siering
Staff writer

GRANITE CITY — Paul D. Gauzen is a shop steward and union official at Jennison-Wright, but he has a lot of sympathy for the company, which he says was driven out of business by the Environmental Protection Agency.

In a letter sent to all employees last November, President Donald Insul said the company would cease operations sometime within the next few months. The letter cited the high costs of cleaning up its plants here and in Toledo, Ohio.

Dioxin and other chemicals have been discovered at the local plant and in soil near the plant. The company treats railroad ties and flooring blocks with preservatives.

Gauzen is a shop steward at Jennison-Wright, as well as being the financial secretary and treasurer of Local 2963 of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America.

Gauzen said he believes the health hazards posed by the company treatments have been a "good company to work for" during his 15 years there and the management has always been decent to the workers.

Gauzen's anger is directed toward the EPA, which he said "has caused a lot of hardships." Among those hardships is the loss of about 40 jobs at the plant, he said, adding that this will have an economic ripple effect on the rest of the Quad City area.

In his 15 years at Jennison-Wright, Gauzen said, he has bought two new cars here and two houses. If he can't get as good a job as he has now, he might lose his current house, and he certainly won't be buying any new cars anytime soon.

Gauzen said he believes the health hazards posed by exposure to chemicals in general are vastly overstated. He said his father worked at Reilly Tar & Chemical Corp. in Granite City for more than 40 years and was exposed to such chemicals as nap-thalene and benzene.

"My Dad told me he wallowed in the stuff, and he's in his 70s and he's not dead."

Gauzen said news media have paid too much attention to theoretical health hazards and not enough to economic hazards posed to real people.

"There is no sympathy for the employees (such as the sympathy for employees at) A.O. Smith or American Steel when they closed," he said.

But his major beef is with the EPA. "There's no pity for the man who can't get a better job because of the EPA," he said. "All this stuff his home. I think the federal government has given the EPA too much power. They ought to sit down and work with people."

He said Insul had tried to work out a sensible cleanup plan over a period of nine years, but the EPA wouldn't go for it. Cleanup costs at the Granite City plant alone have been estimated at between $10 million and $40 million.

"Why not let this man (Insul), who wanted to clean it up, do so, instead of letting it sit there for 20 years like Taracorp?" Actually, the pile of lead at Taracorp in the 1900 block of State Street has been there for more than 50 years.

Gauzen also voiced a gripe that many commentators have made about the state and federal EPA's methods. "Most of those millions of dollars are not for cleanup. It's for studies."

Mayor Von Dee Cruise has complained about how the EPA comes in wearing "moonsuits" and frightening people in the community.

Gauzen reiterated his complaint that the EPA should have been more reasonable in its dealings with Jennison-Wright and allowed the company to clean it up gradually.

"It seems like the taxpayers are going to foot the bill now," he said.

'White Palace' film spending shot in arm for local economy

The filming of the movie "White Palace" in St. Louis pumped an estimated $3 million into the local economy.

Janice Strong, director of St. Louis Film Partnership, said more than 85 cast and crew members were housed in St. Louis while the movie was being filmed from October through late December.

In addition, more than 1,000 St. Louisans were hired to fill various positions that included technicians, actors and extras, Strong said.

Producers also leased space locally for screening and editing facilities, she said.

The Film Partnership worked with West Coast movie executives in bringing the filming to St. Louis.

The movie is the first feature film shot in St. Louis that portrays the city as St. Louis, Strong said.

Scenes from another movie, "Escape From New York," were filmed here several years ago, she said. But the storylines of that film was set in New York City.

"Most of the time, when film production companies leave a city to come here, it's because they want to capture a certain look or authenticity," Strong said. "But this is the first film to showcase St. Louis as St. Louis."

"White Palace" is based on the novel of the same name by local author Glenn Savan. The film starred actors James Spader and Susan Sarandon. Many scenes were shot in the Central West End.

Camera crews filmed scenes inside Duff's restaurant, 392 N. Euclid Ave., and inside the Hampton's condominium complex at Sarah Street and West Pine Boulevard.

The name of the novel and film was inspired by a "belly bomber" restaurant at Grand and Gravois in south St. Louis, Savan said.

Strong said the movie will be good advertising for St. Louis.

Police

Partney also argued there could be a problem because a reduction from captain to lieutenant or lieutenant to sergeant would still leave the police officer in a command position.

Knight said the loss of two patrolmen in 1988 — George Diak, who was dismissed by the board, and Scott Jenkins, who resigned just prior to a hearing before the board — "was taken into consideration" when drafting the ordinance. In pronouncing its decision in Diak's case, the board expressed its regret in not having the choice to consider a lesser punishment.

The proposed disciplinary ordinance, and a proposed ordinance establishing a random drug-testing program, are part of a new manual of rules and regulations for the police department being considered by the City Council.

Knight said that, for the most part, the new manual is just "putting in writing what we believed were the rules all along."

Other than the two proposed ordinances, Knight said, the only other major change would be to clarify the policy concerning appeals of discipline that has been ordered by the police chief.

Under the new policy, only disciplinary actions resulting in a loss of money to the officer could be appealed to the Board of Fire and Police Commissioners, bringing the department policy in line with present state statutes.

Oral and written reprimands could not be appealed under the policy, Knight said, although the officer reprimanded has the right to file a written rebuttal to the reprimand.

Partney jurors polled

By Andy Sloring
Staff writer

GRANITE CITY — Several of the jurors who convicted the Partney brothers of perjury Wednesday in an East Alton courtroom say there was never much doubt in their minds that Alderman Dan Partney was guilty.

But they say there was some doubt about the relative guilt of Don and Dave Partney.

Three jurors talked to the Press-Record/Journal, on a condition of anonymity. All three jurors agreed with defense attorney Leon Scroggins' opening and closing statements that the case against the Partneys smacked of a political "witch hunt."

"We felt like the whole case was a little bit more than was on the surface," said one woman juror.

"Two of them, we thought, were less guilty than the other," said another woman.

A male juror said most of the three hours of deliberation (minus the time it took to eat food supplied by the court) were taken up with deciding whether Don and Dave were guilty.

He said the jury agreed almost immediately that Dan Partney, as a deputy voting registrar, knew better than to swear, in an affidavit, that his brothers' legal residence was the family business, Granite Sheet Metal.

"Eleven were in favor right away of convicting Dan. One was in the middle of the road," the male juror said.

As he sees it, what decided the case was the political background of the family. Don Partney Sr., the brothers' late father, was mayor of Granite City from 1965 to 1973.

"They know where they are supposed to vote from," the man said. And even if they didn't, he said, "ignorance of the law is no excuse."

All three Partneys had told the jury that their lawyer, Scroggins, had said it was OK to vote from the business address. Dan Partney testified that another lawyer, Bill Schooley, had advised him it was OK for Dave Partney to vote from the business address.

Assistant State's Attorney Richard Rybak established in testimony that Scroggins was the corporate lawyer for Granite Sheet Metal and had been the Partneys' personal lawyer for many years. He was also the city attorney, appointed by the Partneys' father, when the latter was mayor.

The male juror said that connection "didn't really enter into it (the jury's verdict) at all."

"It boiled down to the fact we felt that all three had knowingly committed perjury and that, based on their extensive political background, the state had proved the case beyond a reasonable doubt."

Bowles

Alderman Dan Partney.

"The oath they take (people registering to vote) is very clear," she said. "I don't know what I can do to make sure people don't lie."

Referring to the Partneys, Bowles said, "This is a decision they made. I don't know why they made that decision."

Dan Partney, who is a deputy voting registrar, testified during the two-day trial Jan. 23-24 that he never received any training about residency requirements.

Bowles rejected that assertion. Registrars, she said, don't get a commission unless they complete a training course that takes about 30-45 minutes and includes specific instructions on what constitutes a legal residence for voting.

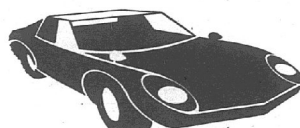

Bowles said people registering to vote "swear that the address from which they register is their domicile."

"If they choose to perjure themselves about what is their domicile, then it's their neck. They may be open to prosecution."

"Mr. Bill Haine's acquired a new client because, evidently, the opinion of other attorneys wasn't good enough."

Law gives tool for bus safety

School children riding buses in Madison County will be safer in 1990 because of an anti-drug law affecting bus drivers, said county Regional Superintendent of Schools Harry A. Briggs Jr.

Applicants for new or renewed school bus driver permits must now prove that they have passed tests for drug and alcohol use within 90 days of the date of application, Briggs said.

"This authorization gives my office an additional tool to ensure that the 27,000 children who ride buses to and from school in Madison County do so in safety," he said.

The regional superintendent's office has been responsible for determining the competence and physical fitness of school bus drivers in the past, "but until this week we have lacked statutory authorization to require drug testing," he said.

Such authorization was provided by the Illinois legislature in House Bill 572, which was supported by the Illinois Association of Regional Superintendents of Schools. The bill took effect on Jan. 1.

"In school transportation, there is nothing more important than the bus driver's fitness," Briggs said. "We make sure they have been trained and tested for competence and licensed."

"Now an important new requirement has been added, and we intend to hold up the issuance of all permits from now on until documentation is provided by a licensed physician that each bus driver applicant has been tested for drug use, as the law says."

Briggs is an active member of the Illinois Association of Regional Superintendents of Schools, a statewide organization seeking to strengthen Illinois public policy on education.

Formal dress sale Feb. 17

The Granite City High School Cheerleading Organization will be hosting a formal dress sale on Saturday, Feb. 17 in the girls' gymnasium.

Doors will open at 9 a.m., a style show featuring gowns to be sold will be held at 10 a.m. and the sale will conclude at 1 p.m.

Anyone wishing to enter a gown in the sale should pick up an application (entry form) from Gladys Zukas or Terry Papa at the high school. A $3 entry fee will be charged for each gown entered. If the gown is to be modeled in the style show, entry forms must be received no later than Wednesday, Feb. 14.

Anyone entering a gown in the sale must have someone at the sale responsible for the gown. The cheerleading organization will not be responsible for gowns left unattended at the sale. All sales transactions are between seller and buyer.

SIU winter enrollment up

On-campus student enrollment at Southern Illinois University at Edwardsville this winter is the highest it has been in 12 years. Current on-campus enrollment is 10,140, compared to last winter's enrollment of 9,965.

Enrollment in winter 1978 was 10,253. It declined to 9,051 in 1981 and has increased steadily since.

The number of full-time students attending classes at the university is 6,218, an increase over last year's enrollment of 6,011. Full-time equivalency (FTE) is also higher than last year, with this year's FTE at 7,760. Last year's FTE was 7,594.

Modest increases are evident in all academic disciplines offered by the university, including business, education, dental medicine, fine arts and communications, humanities, nursing, engineering, science, and social sciences.

The School of Education, with 1,292 students this winter, shows the largest increase in enrollment. Last year's enrollment was 1,122. The largest increases are at the junior, senior and graduate levels.

While female student enrollment continues to be higher than that of males, increases are evident in both categories. This year's female student enrollment is 5,544, and male enrollment is 4,596. Last winter, female enrollment was 5,456, with male enrollment at 4,509.
